made during the year, the Spring opening of

is undoubtedly the most beautiful. There is a delicate simplicity about these goods which never fails to charm those possessed of an artistic taste, and although they may not vary as much in styles from year to year as goods of showy hue, still like spring flowers, they have a freshness and newness all their own, which nothing on earth can take from them but time itself.

Mr. Hosack, of Allegheny, offered a resolution authorizing a committee of two members of the senate and three of the house to investigate charges of mismanagement of the work of the dairy and food commission in Pittsburg. oleomargarine are sold monthly in Pittsburg and that certain officers of the department neglect and refuse to prosecute violations of the law. It is stated that certain dealers in oleomargarine in Pittsburg pay to officers, agents or others for said department one cent per pound upon all oleomargarine they are permitted to sell in violation of the oleomorgarine act and that those paying sald sum are shielded and protected from prosecution. The resolution passed unanimously. In his speech in support of his resolution. Mr. Hosack used the name of Frank M. Moore, the agent of the dairy and food commissioner in Pittsburg, who is accused of being implicated in the matter. He said he was fully prepared to substantiate the charges with affidavits, but for the present would not furnish names and dates, for that would give the guilty an opportunity to prepare themselves, Mr. Hosack said he felt it to be his duty to expose and have punished the guilty persons. One affidavit, which was read mentioning the names of the affliant, made charges of this kind: - told me that he had been approached and asked to act as a prosecutor for the state in conjunction with Mr. Moore, the dairy and food commissioners' agent, and that the suits were to be brought to deceive the public. In January, 1897, Mr. - was around to buy a carload of oleomorgarine at wholesale. He was told that he could have it at one cent less per pound, if it was not for trade, and it took a cent a pound to keep the Pittsburg market

Another affidavit stated that the makr, while in a certain store in Pittsburg leard Mr. Moore tell the proprietor that teamen were complaining about tea being given away with sales of oleo. Moore said that he was not interested further than to keep peace in the fam-

USELESS PROTESTS.

Mr. Hosack said further that a prominent attorney of Pittsburg, whose name will be given later, applied to the department of agriculture for relief in this matter and was told that he must do everything through Mr. Moore, the pure food agent at Pittsburg. It was charged that but very few suits were brought against dealers, although the butter dealers have repeatedly urged that dealers in oleomargarine be prosecuted.

The house was much surprised at the charges contained in the resolution, and after adjournment, sought Mr. Hosack for further particulars. Mr. Moore was a member of the last house and was active in the passage of the pure food bill. Mr. Hosack denied the story that his resolution was in any sense factional. He said the information had come to him from reputable sources in Pitts-There are more affidavits, he said, which will be presented to the in-London, Feb. 19.—A dispatch to the Times from Athens says: "Colonel Vassos has issued an order advising his men to avoid any collision with the foreign marines and exhorting the Cretans to treat fairly both the Europeans and the Moslems. He promises the latter protection and religious equality, but will try to persuade them to quit the island. He will punish severely all acts of violence against them. Theodorus Delyannis, prime minister of Greece, the statesman who has sent out to the whole world the defiance that "Greece accepts full responsibility for all her acts." Theodorus got his name from the Greek Glannis (diminutive for John) and the Saracenic Dell, though how the family acquired the Turkish prefix cannot be said. He is the eldest son of a young branch of the family, and at an early age displayed all those qualities of which the Greek is justly proud. Mrs. Sally A. Cotton, the last speaker of the morning, delivered an address on a "National Training School for Women.

Speaking of man's mission on earth, Mrs. Cotton said: "Man's mission on earth is the subjection, domination and utilization of the forces of nature for the benefit of mankind, and governments are formed for the more successful accomplishment of this mission. On the earth there will never be any creature higher than man, but he may become a higher type, and the needs of the future will demand a higher type. Higher and more complex conditions will require higher adaptability to meet those conditions and it is the woman's mission to develop this higher adaptability in man. "But all duty is reciprocal, and it is the duty of the government which seeks the welfare of its people to offer to its women an opportunity for the attainment of this scientific motherhood, which will be fraught with so much good. "Scientific motherhood will gain no marked impetus while restricted to a fortunate few. It must be made a national possibility, in order to become a national benefit. Like all our national blessings, it should be "by the people" for the people itself, and it is the duty of government to give her an opportunity to acquire this scientific knowledge. It can be done through establishing by the government of a national training school for women, where the women of the nation shall be trained in the sciences of domesticity and peace just as at West Point and Annapolia the men are trained in the science of Greeks, In 1887 he was given his first state office—that of grand envoy to Paris —a post which he filled so well as to merit being recalled to Athens at the end of three years to assist in the home government. He espoused the cause of Coumoundouros, the greatest of the Greek statesmen. Later he faced that leader as a rival, and by his shrewdness and eleverness vanquished him. In the Coumoundouros ministry Delyannis was made minister of foreign affairs, and took part in the Berlin congress. When his chief and rival died in 1883, Delyannis was alone left to lead the opposition forces against Tricoupls, who was then in power.
